

Tungsten TRYCON AI Global Markets

Monthly Comment

The strategy capitalized on the recovery of the global equity markets, which continued into the first half of May. It gained particularly through long positions in major US indices, as well as in the FTSE/MIB and South Korea's KOSPI. Conversely, it incurred losses in the EuroStoxx 50. Trading in government bonds had a negative impact both in North America and Europe. In an environment of rising yields, long positions in US and German bonds suffered in particular. Ten-year Japanese bonds offered a small bright spot, with the strategy being successful on the short side here. In currencies, gains from the rise in the GBP, as well as from alternating long and short positions in the USD, were roughly offset by losses resulting from the rise in the CAD and AUD in the second half of the month. The strategy was able to benefit from declining stock market volatility in the USA and Europe. In contrast, there were slight losses from money market rates, mainly due to a long position in the three-month SONIA.

Fund description

The fund's objective is to provide absolute returns with a moderate risk profile and low correlation to equity markets and other investments. The underlying trading models are based on Artificial Intelligence.

The Tungsten TRYCON AI Global Markets pursues a systematic multi-asset long/short strategy. Since September 2013, it uses quantitative models based on Artificial Intelligence to identify trading opportunities in the financial markets. Periodic re-learning leads to regular updates of the models. The investment universe comprises some 60 global equity, bond, interest rate and currency markets. In these markets, the fund can take both long and short positions using regulated, liquid and exchange-traded financial instruments. The portfolio is dynamically adjusted to changing market conditions in accordance with a strict risk management. The strategy is characterized by low correlation with traditional investments.
