

Tungsten TRYCON AI Global Markets

Monthly Comment

In October, the strategy benefited from the rise in global equity markets while also holding up well during the early-month correction through short positions. Alongside gains in the S&P 500 and Nasdaq 100, it also gained in the DAX 40, IBEX 35, and OMX 30. Losses were incurred primarily from short positions in the Indian Nifty 50 and the Russell 2000. The contribution from bond trading was slightly negative. In Bund futures, a combination of long and short positions proved successful, long positions in Italian bond futures also generated gains. These were offset by losses mainly in UK and US bonds, where the portfolio had been short during the rally in the first half of the month. Currency losses largely stemmed from the strength of the USD against the JPY, GBP, and AUD, as the strategy had held long exposures in these currencies against the greenback. Market turbulence on October 10 moderately affected results from trading US equity market volatility, while expectations of higher US interest rates toward month-end weighed on the contribution from money market futures.

Fund description

The fund's objective is to provide absolute returns with a moderate risk profile and low correlation to equity markets and other investments. The underlying trading models are based on Artificial Intelligence.

The Tungsten TRYCON AI Global Markets pursues a systematic multi-asset long/short strategy. Since September 2013, it uses quantitative models based on Artificial Intelligence to identify trading opportunities in the financial markets. Periodic re-learning leads to regular updates of the models. The investment universe comprises some 60 global equity, bond, interest rate and currency markets. In these markets, the fund can take both long and short positions using regulated, liquid and exchange-traded financial instruments. The portfolio is dynamically adjusted to changing market conditions in accordance with a strict risk management. The strategy is characterized by low correlation with traditional investments.

Performance contribution by sector

The sector performance attribution is intended to be indicative and to give an indication of winning and losing components of the derivative positions in the fund. The results do not include fees/expenses or contributions from the cash/bond portfolio and do not add up to the aggregate fund performance.
